When to Call 9-1-1

Any time a person believes that emergent medical care is required, specifically if the situation is potentially life-threatening, call 9-1-1 immediately! Some examples include:

- Chest Pain
- Loss of Consciousness
- Weakness on one side
- Severe burns
- Seizure
- Blood in vomit or stool
- Severe allergic reaction
- Shortness of breath
- Sudden Slurring of words
- Trauma
- Poisoning
- Severe Stomach pain

It is also important to consider if the sick person's condition could become life-threatening on the way to the hospital, there is a delay in getting to the hospital or if moving the person could cause further injury. If so, the person needs the skills or equipment of paramedics so call 9-1-1 right away.
